Things to do today:

Create a challenge that involves creating a SHA1 collision. This will hopefully help everyone understand that SHA1 should die. Now, what major software project relies on SHA1 these days. Nothing important, of course, just git. What could go wrong?

This challenge is brought to you by rigel.